When one thinks of the campus of the University of the South, the Gothic theme that permeates most buildings on campus is maximized by the elegant cathedral appearance of the campus chapel. Envisioned long before actual construction began in 1904, and not fully completed until 1959, All Saints' has become exactly what it was designed to be– the center of campus. Services were first held in All Saints' in 1910 after construction was partially completed and halted due to a lack of funds. Forty-seven years later, after much discussion and fund raising, work resumed as part of the centennial anniversary. The first service in the completed structure was held in June of 1959. Located just north of the original campus chapel, St. Augustine's, All Saints' comprises the south side of the quadrangle.

The completion of All Saints' was a great accomplishment for the university. Since its official founding on July 4, 1857, the university has grown from an initial enrollment of 9 in 1868 to nearly 1,300 in 1997. Chosen for its secluded location and because of a donation by the Sewanee Mining Company, the university took on the informal name "Sewanee" from the Shawnee Indians who gave that name to the entire Cumberland Plateau.

The first meeting of the Board of Trustees on July 4, 1857, began the series of events which resulted in the laying of the first cornerstone on October 10, 1858. This first establishment was destroyed by federal troops in 1863. In 1866 Bishop Charles Todd Quintard and George R. Fairbanks formally reestablished the university. By 1868 students enrolled under the leadership of Bishop Quintard and the University of the South held its first semesters of classes. The first Convocation was held on September 16, 1868 inside the simple wooden frame structure of St. Augustine's Chapel.

One of the greatest benefactors of the University campus has been Jessie Ball du Pont. A testament to her generosity is the building which bears her name: du Pont Library was named for Mrs. du Pont, not built by her. Academic scholarships and endowments for other causes make up the majority of her gifts, but her generosity was felt in the forms of smaller individual gifts to faculty and community members and also includes the Casavant Organ in All Saints' Chapel.

Prior to the construction in 1965 of the present structure named in her honor, the volumes of the University library had a colorful history.

The first location was on the site of the old Alpha Tau Omega fraternity house. With the construction of the original Hodgson Hall in 1875, the first stone building on campus was the location of the budding University library; a collection of volumes given by Oxford and Cambridge Universities greatly increased the size of the University collection. However, the distance to Hodgson from the main campus proved to be too great and the library was moved to the third floor of Walsh Hall in 1897. An Alumnus of the University donated funds to convert Convocation Hall into a library, and the library finally moved into that space in 1901. The volumes remained there until the newly built du Pont became available in 1965.

Hodgson did not remain empty for very long before becoming the University infirmary in 1897. In 1911 the structure burned and was rebuilt, adding the name "Emerald" at the request of the donors. In 1931 the building burned again, and was rebuilt over the next two years. The present day Emerald-Hodgson Hospital was completed in 1974. In 1994, renovations were completed to convert Hodgson into a dormitory.

The ATO house was purchased in 1880 by the fraternity; the original structure burned in 1959. Convocation is now used as a hall for receptions, meetings, and small performances.

Construction of the library required moving another increasingly important structure...the Kirby house, formerly the Pi Kappa Phi fraternity house, which was opened as Stirling's Coffee House in the Spring of 1995.

Built in 1890 with funds given by Vincent D. Walsh, Walsh-Ellett Hall makes up the north side of the quadrangle. Originally known as Walsh Hall, a gift for renovation of the entire building in 1959 by Dr. Edward Coleman Ellett removed the central entryway from the first floor and required the removal of the original dark wooden paneling from the classrooms. One classroom has carefully kept its original decor and in the summer of 1996, the ground floor was once again remodeled and the central entryway restored. However, the massive double staircases that once connected the lobby to the second floor were not reinstated.

Connecting Walsh-Ellett, Guerry and Carnegie Science Hall is the Cleveland Memorial. Built in 1965, Cleveland is presently home to the Registrar and the Office of Career Services. Carnegie Science Hall, 1913, a gift of Andrew Carnegie, was home to the Biology, Chemistry, Forestry and Physics departments until the completion of the J. Albert Woods Laboratories in 1968 near the site of the Magnolia Dining Hall. The Mathematics and Sciences were finally united in one building, but only for a short time. The J. Bayard Snowden Forestry Building, planned by Charles Cheston as a space for the Forestry and Geology programs, was completed in 1962. The interior of Snowden makes up for its small appearance; some 31 different species of wood panel its walls; each room in the building being paneled by a different species, and there are more than 4,000 different wood samples housed in an immense collection.

The Observatory on the top of Carnegie housed the gift of a Clark telescope by Mrs. J.L. Harris. The dome was added in 1942 through a gift of Martin Johnson and a design by Dr. Edward McCrady. Carnegie presently houses the Offices of the Treasurer, the Fine Arts department and the University Print Services.

Guerry Hall, named for Dr. Alexander Guerry, former Vice-Chancellor, was added in 1961 as additional classroom space, but also provided for an art gallery and a large auditorium. Guerry is currently home for the Foreign

The School of Theology has been part of the Campus since its earliest days; the founding fathers noting that "a theological seminary must be part of the plan because of the need for native ministry." With the completion of St. Luke's Hall in 1878 and the installation of Reverend Telfair Hodgson as dean, the School of Theology became a permanent part of the University. However, it should be noted that theology students' names appear in the register as early as 1870, and the first product of the program, Charles McIlvaine Gray of Tennessee, was ordained in 1872. Built with a gift from Mrs. Charlotte Morris Manigault, Saint Luke's Hall was named for Bishop Quintard in a round-about way: Mrs. Manigault knew that the bishop had been a medical doctor, so she requested the name of the biblical physician for the building. Saint Luke's was expanded and renovated extensively in 1956 and 1957, and again in 1993. Currently, a small number of classrooms, the offices of the Sewanee Review, Philosophy, English, and Classics departments and even some student have a home there; the first three floors dedicated to academics and the fourth as living space.

Saint Luke's Chapel was begun in 1904 as a memorial to Telfair Hodgson, former Dean of the School of Theology, by his wife. The small chapel was a welcome addition that housed the daily worship services for the seminary. Coupled with the academic hall, the two buildings continued to serve the seminary until 1984 when the entire theological campus moved to its present site in Hamilton Hall and its annex. In 1994 and 1995 Saint Luke's Chapel was renovated to continue as a chapel, but also to serve as a concert and small performance hall.

In the spring of 1996, ground was broken for the Chapel of the Apostles to be built near Hamilton and to add to the growing campus of the School of Theology.

School of Theology

Charles DuBois

Professor Charles DuBois came to Sewanee ten years ago, fresh from serving as rector of an Episcopal parish in southern New Jersey. New to academia, the professor entered the school as pastor of the seminary and director of the field education program.

But eventually, he began imparting to his students what he had himself practiced as a priest: pastoral care – broadly, the nurture of the church and Christian community. It was a natural transition, and a good fit, he found.

Trends in the field of pastoral care in the past tewnty years have given motivation to this man who retired from the School of Theology in the spring.

"Even the narrow definition of pastoral theology is undergoing a change in the way we understand it," said Dr. DuBois "There is a renewed interest in pastoral care as advocacy, anc a concern about doing pastoral care in a post-Establishmen church. These are positive shifts. It's about time."

Another major trend that has occured during the professor's tenure, he aid, has been a shift from individual care to a broader focus on the Christian mmunity. "Family systems" theories – caring for the individual in light a greater whole – abound these days. A reemphasis on the baptismal venant in the Book of Common Prayer has helped fuel this change: the ncentration enables the Christain Community to focus its energies on the y-to-day health of the community rather than on crisis management, en though, of course, the latter still exists.

"There is an aspect of care that has to be focused on (Christian) formation," said. "Simply visiting hospitals and shut-ins has become a narrow view."

Enter the community of faith, which includes the parish priest but is not nited to the priest. "There is a need to do pastoral theology contextually, abling a community to do it, rather than just the priest."

This priest leaves behind not only his job as a professor of pastoral eology, but his job as Associate Dean of Student Affairs. He said he will iss his daily interaction with students the most. His wife, meanwhile, has and plans for the professor's retirement.

"She has this fantasy that we are going to play golf together," he said.

Bill Hethcock

Professor Bill Hethcock came to his job as a homeless professor at The School of Theology through a back door. In 1985, after Edna Evans retired as director of the field education program, Profesor Hethcock took over that task full time, having been a parish priest in three congregations prior to his move to Sewanee. But the Episcopal priest also knew that Ms. Evans had been helping homeletics students – helping them craft and hone their sermons. He was interested.

"I had already begun working with preachers in small groups, " he said. "I enjoyed talking to people about how they communicated the gospel." He has been talking with students about that ever since.

Every weekday morning in Hamilton Hall, master of divinity students in the School of Theology preach sermons that bear the mark of Professor Hethcock's handiwork. They are not his words, of course, but they are the final product of his criticisms and suggestions for improvement. The sermons are videotaped for further study. "Communicating from the pulpit is very difficult, and doing it effectively requires work."

The professor had the opportunity to work again in "the field" in 1992, when he spent a semester-long sabbatical serving as a priest at St. Luke's parish in North Little Rock, Arkansas. He preached every Sunday and described his time there as his "greatest moment of learning."

He plans to keep learning post-retirement. In June of 1997 he served on staff of the Preaching Excellent Conference at General Seminary . He said he has no immediate plans for retirement, other than enjoying life on the Domain with his wife, Phebe.

He anticipates missing at least one thing, however. "I will miss the students – getting to know them, and listening to them preach."

In order to get a good idea of the story of athletics in Sewanee history, we must look at the past and the present. The most famous example of Sewanee's athletic history is the football team of 1899 who became legends for their five wins in six days over Texas A&M, Texas at Austin, Tulane, Louisiana State University, and Ole Miss. Sewanee was also instrumental in creating both the old Southern Conference and the Southeastern Conference: once we left the SEC, we became an integral part of and we remain, consistently, one of the most powerful colleges in the Southern Collegiate Athletic Conference.

Completed in 1994, the Robert Dobbs Fowler Sports Center is an interesting structure that created new spaces around older buildings. The new complex contains the older Ormond Simkins Field House (1926), the Shaffer Gymnasium (1903), the Charlotte Guerry Memorial Tennis Courts (1964), and centers around the Juhan Gymnasium, built in 1956 and 1957 to honor Bishop Frank Juhan, student of the University and later, chancellor. The four buildings mentioned above, along with the small indoor pool constructed with the Jujah Gymnasium, served the University until a need was observed in 1987 for an enlarged and improved facility. Robert Fowler was one of the first to recognise this need and bring it to the attention of the Trustees. He gave an initial "challenge" gift of five million for the planning and construction of an improved facility. An anonymous donor also gave another five million to assure renovation of the present structures and to add an indoor track. After his death in 1993, a bequest from Fowler's estate gave an additional gift of ten million: the combined amounts making his contribution the largest gift from a single donor in the history of the University. The result is the expanded facility we enjoy today.

The Sewanee Swimming & Diving teams celebrated their 30th season by an all-out assault on the record board. A total of 33 new school records were established as the men's and women's teams cruised to 8-4 and 8-3 wins.

The season culmintaed in inspiring fashion as both teams placed a close second in the SCAC Championship Invitational. Robbie Spuill ('97), became the first female swimmer from Sewanee to qualify for Nationals. She was joined by diver Mackenzie Johnson ('99). Jon Morris ('99), dove to All-American status for the second year in a row with an 8th place finish on the 3 meter and 11th on the 1 meter springboard. He was joined by NCAA qualifiers Brian Spurlock ('98), and CHarles Seymour ('00). The men placed 33rd in the nation and both teams were honored as Academic All-Americans.

In its first year as a varsity sport, the equestrian team finished the regular season as Regional High Point College with a 60-plus point lead over Midway College of Midway, Kentucky. Katherine Davis won High Point Rider of the Region and has automatically qualified to compete in a special class at the Intercollegiate Horse Show Association (IHSA) National Horse Show. Nationals were held at Mount Holyoke College in Holyoke, Massachusetts. Eight team members qualified individually during the year to compete at Regionals, which was held at Midway College. As High Point team, a specified team from Sewanee competed in Zones against three other Regional High Point teams. Zones were held at Wesleyan. The top teams competed at Nationals in team classes.

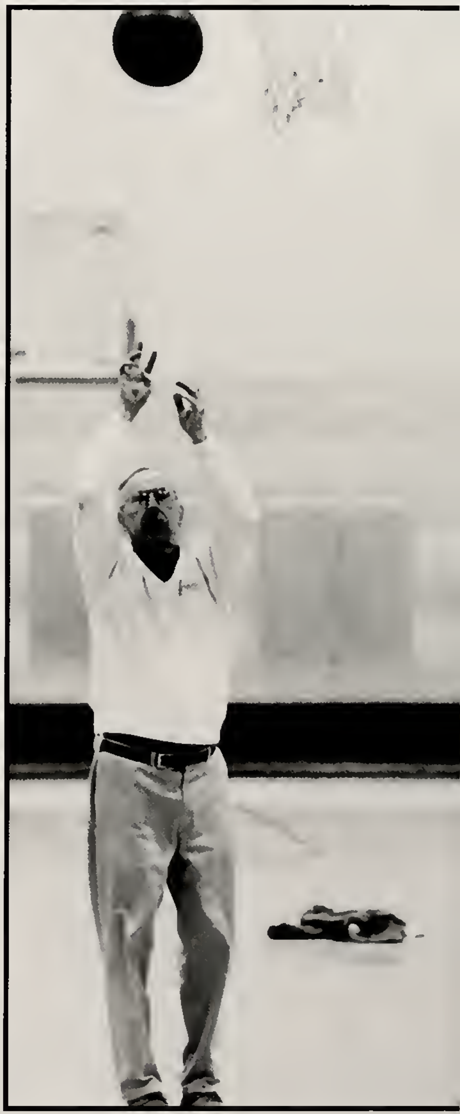
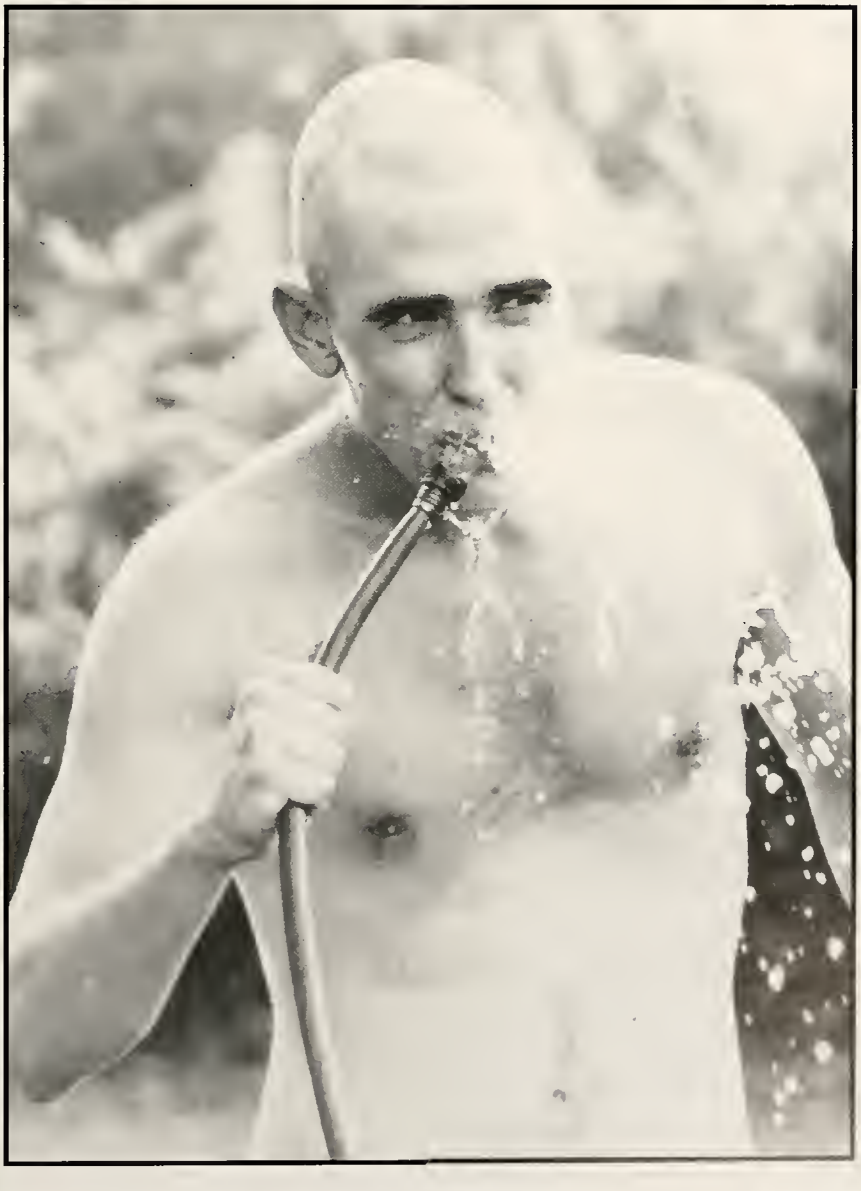
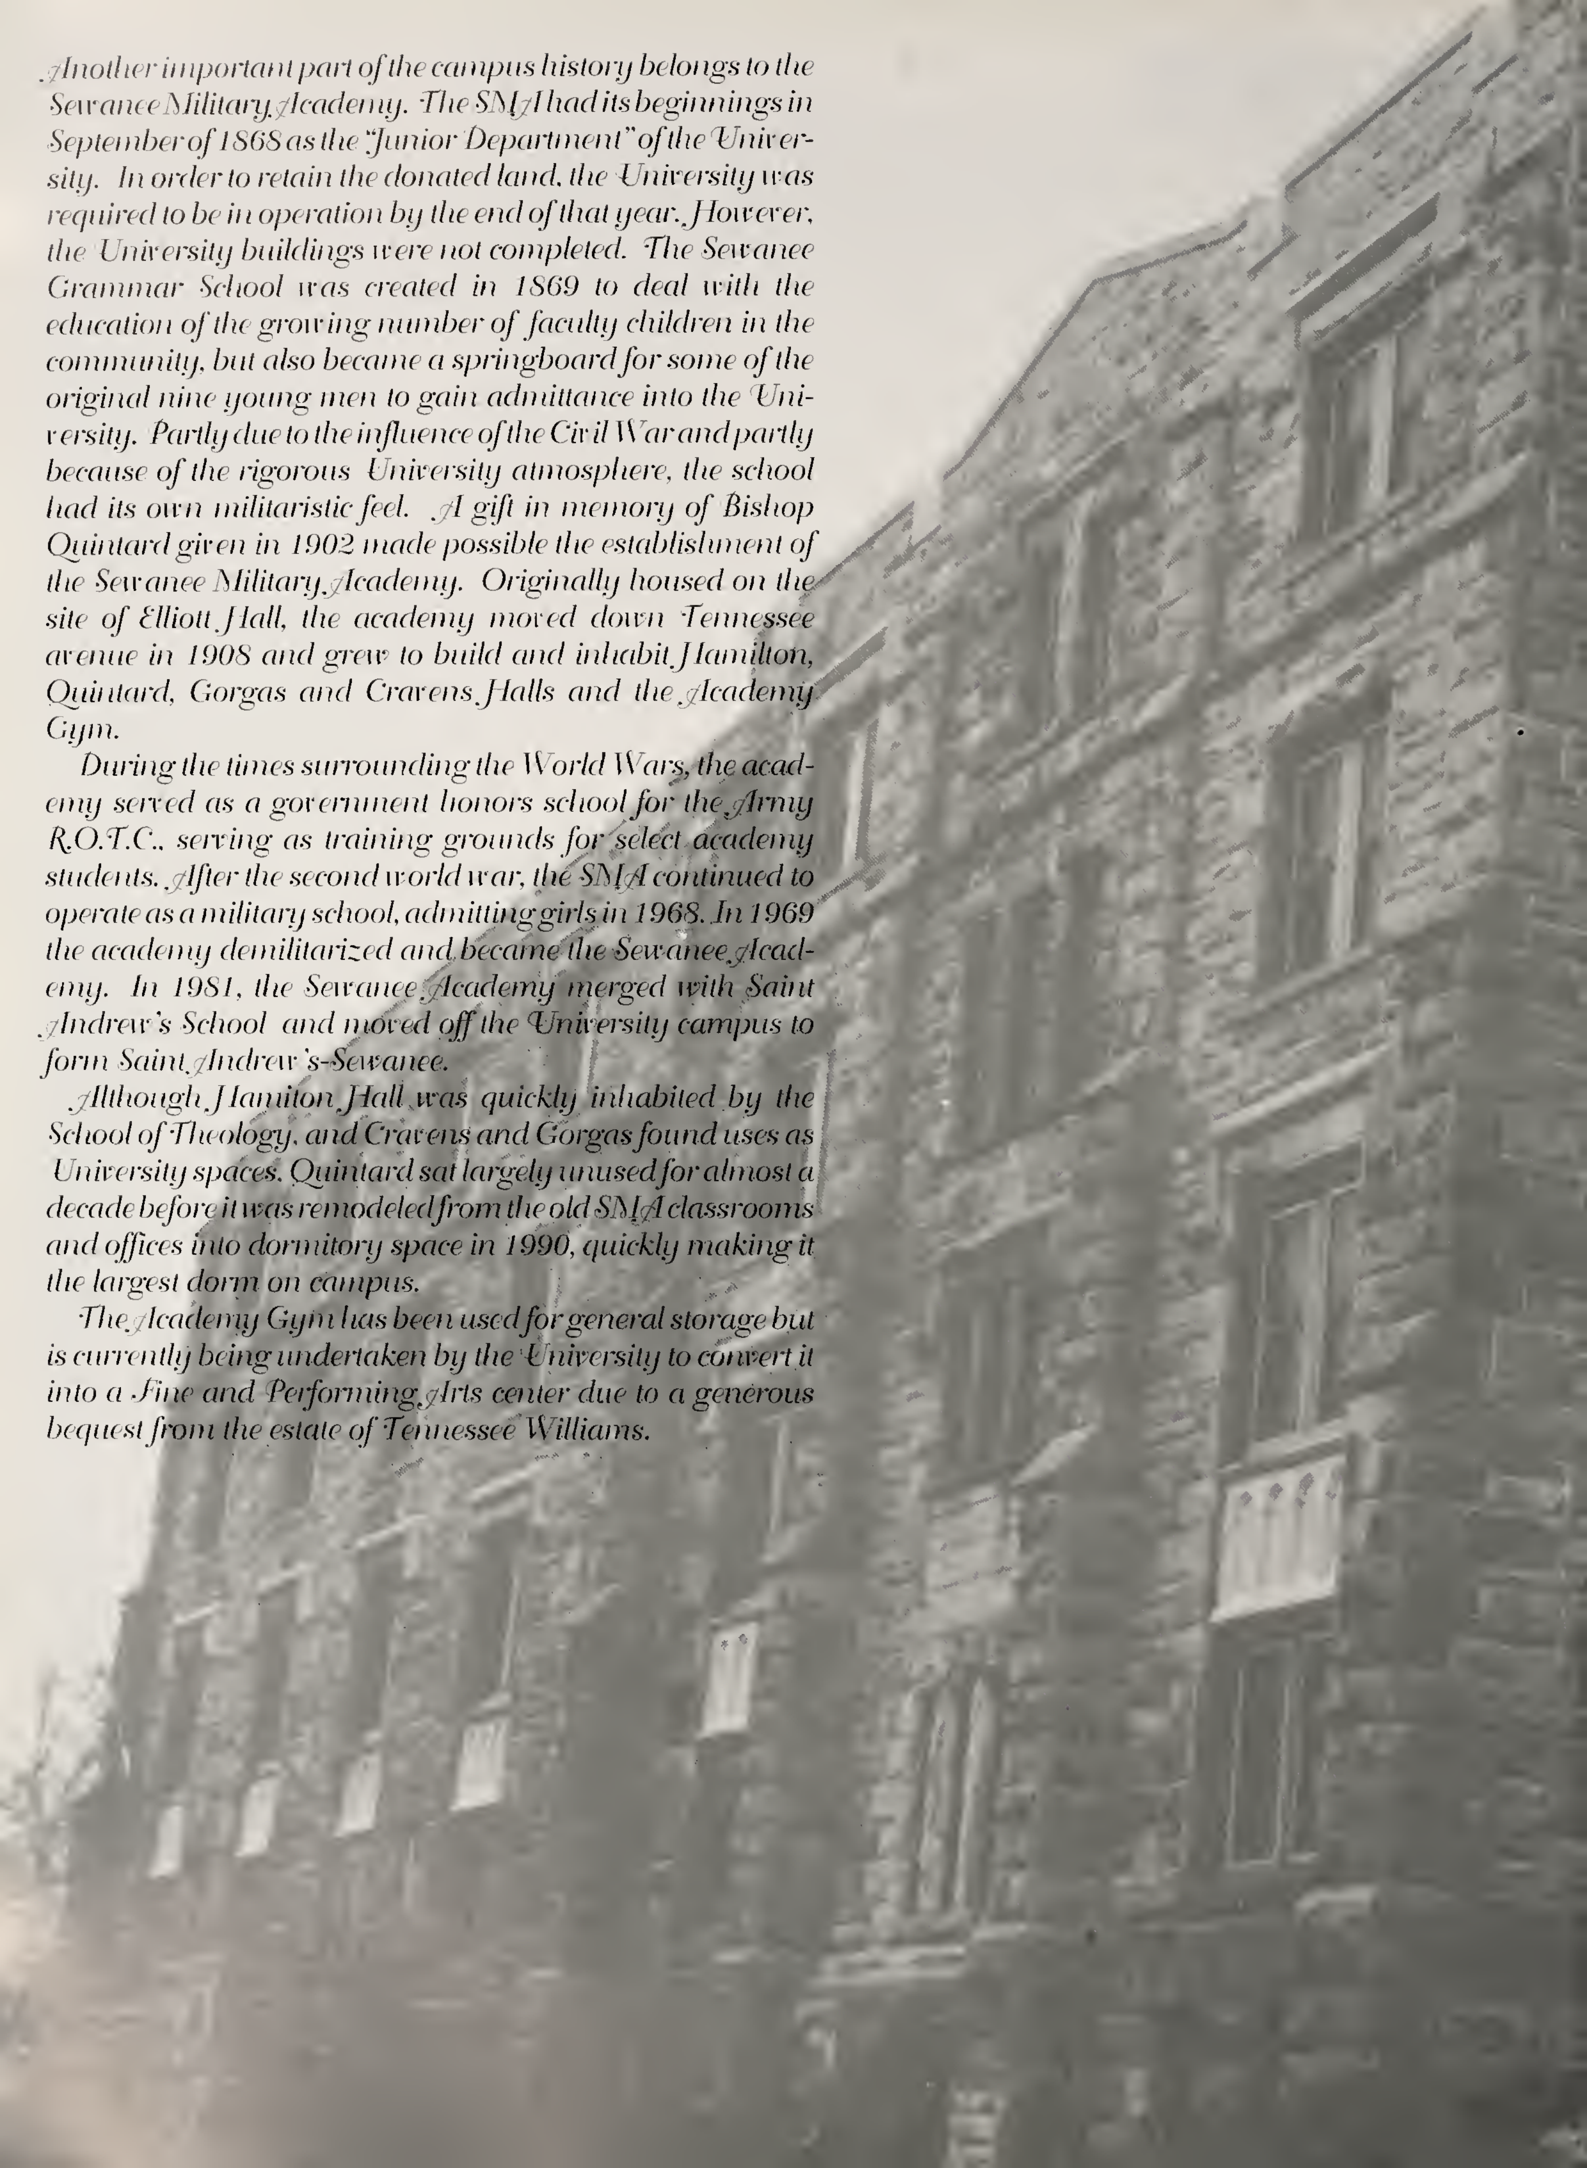
Intramurals







Another important part of the campus history belongs to the Sewanee Military Academy. The SMA had its beginnings in September of 1868 as the "Junior Department" of the University. In order to retain the donated land, the University was required to be in operation by the end of that year. However, the University buildings were not completed. The Sewanee Grammar School was created in 1869 to deal with the education of the growing number of faculty children in the community, but also became a springboard for some of the original nine young men to gain admittance into the University. Partly due to the influence of the Civil War and partly because of the rigorous University atmosphere, the school had its own militaristic feel. A gift in memory of Bishop Quintard given in 1902 made possible the establishment of the Sewanee Military Academy. Originally housed on the site of Elliott Hall, the academy moved down Tennessee avenue in 1908 and grew to build and inhabit Hamilton, Quintard, Gorgas and Cravens Halls and the Academy Gym.

During the times surrounding the World Wars, the academy served as a government honors school for the Army R.O.T.C., serving as training grounds for select academy students. After the second world war, the SMA continued to operate as a military school, admitting girls in 1968. In 1969 the academy demilitarized and became the Sewanee Academy. In 1981, the Sewanee Academy merged with Saint Andrew's School and moved off the University campus to form Saint Andrew's-Sewanee.

Although Hamiton Hall was quickly inhabited by the School of Theology, and Cravens and Gorgas found uses as University spaces. Quintard sat largely unused for almost a decade before it was remodeled from the old SMA classrooms and offices into dormitory space in 1990, quickly making it the largest dorm on campus.

The Academy Gym has been used for general storage but is currently being undertaken by the University to convert it into a Fine and Performing Arts center due to a generous bequest from the estate of Tennessee Williams.

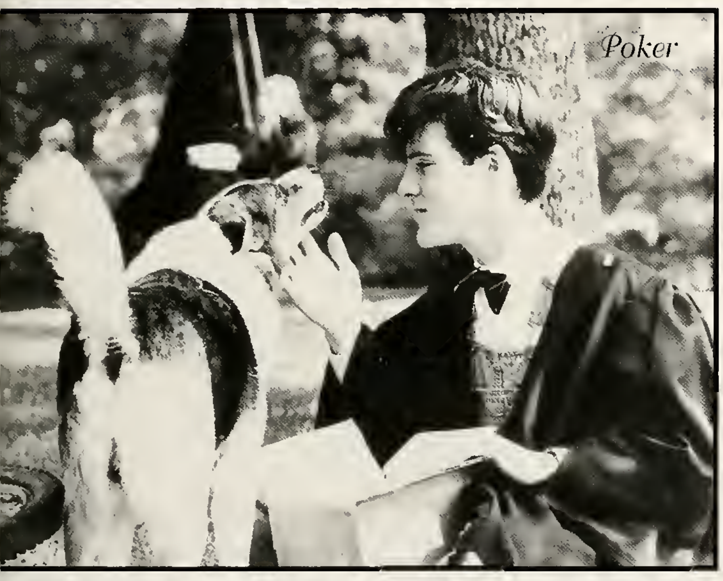
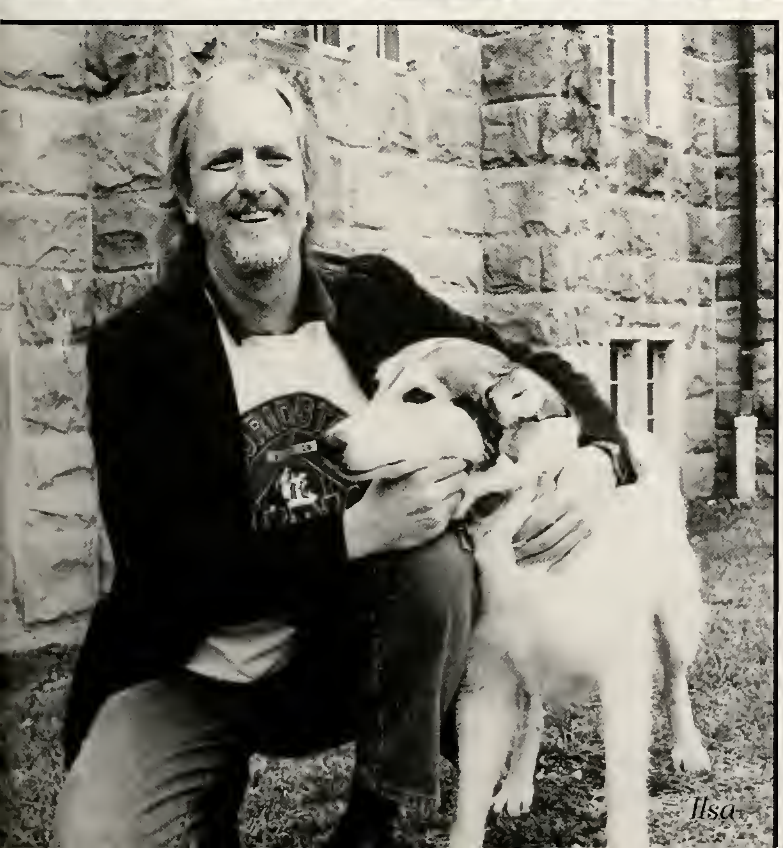
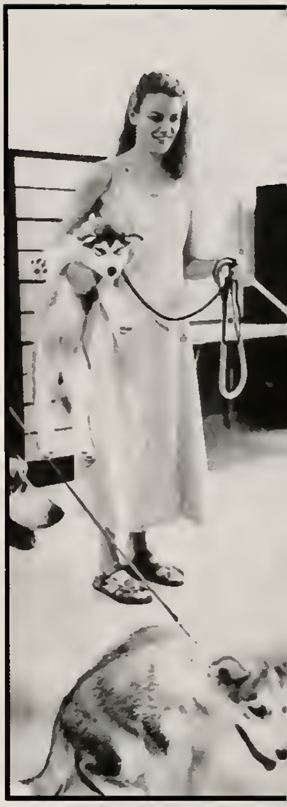
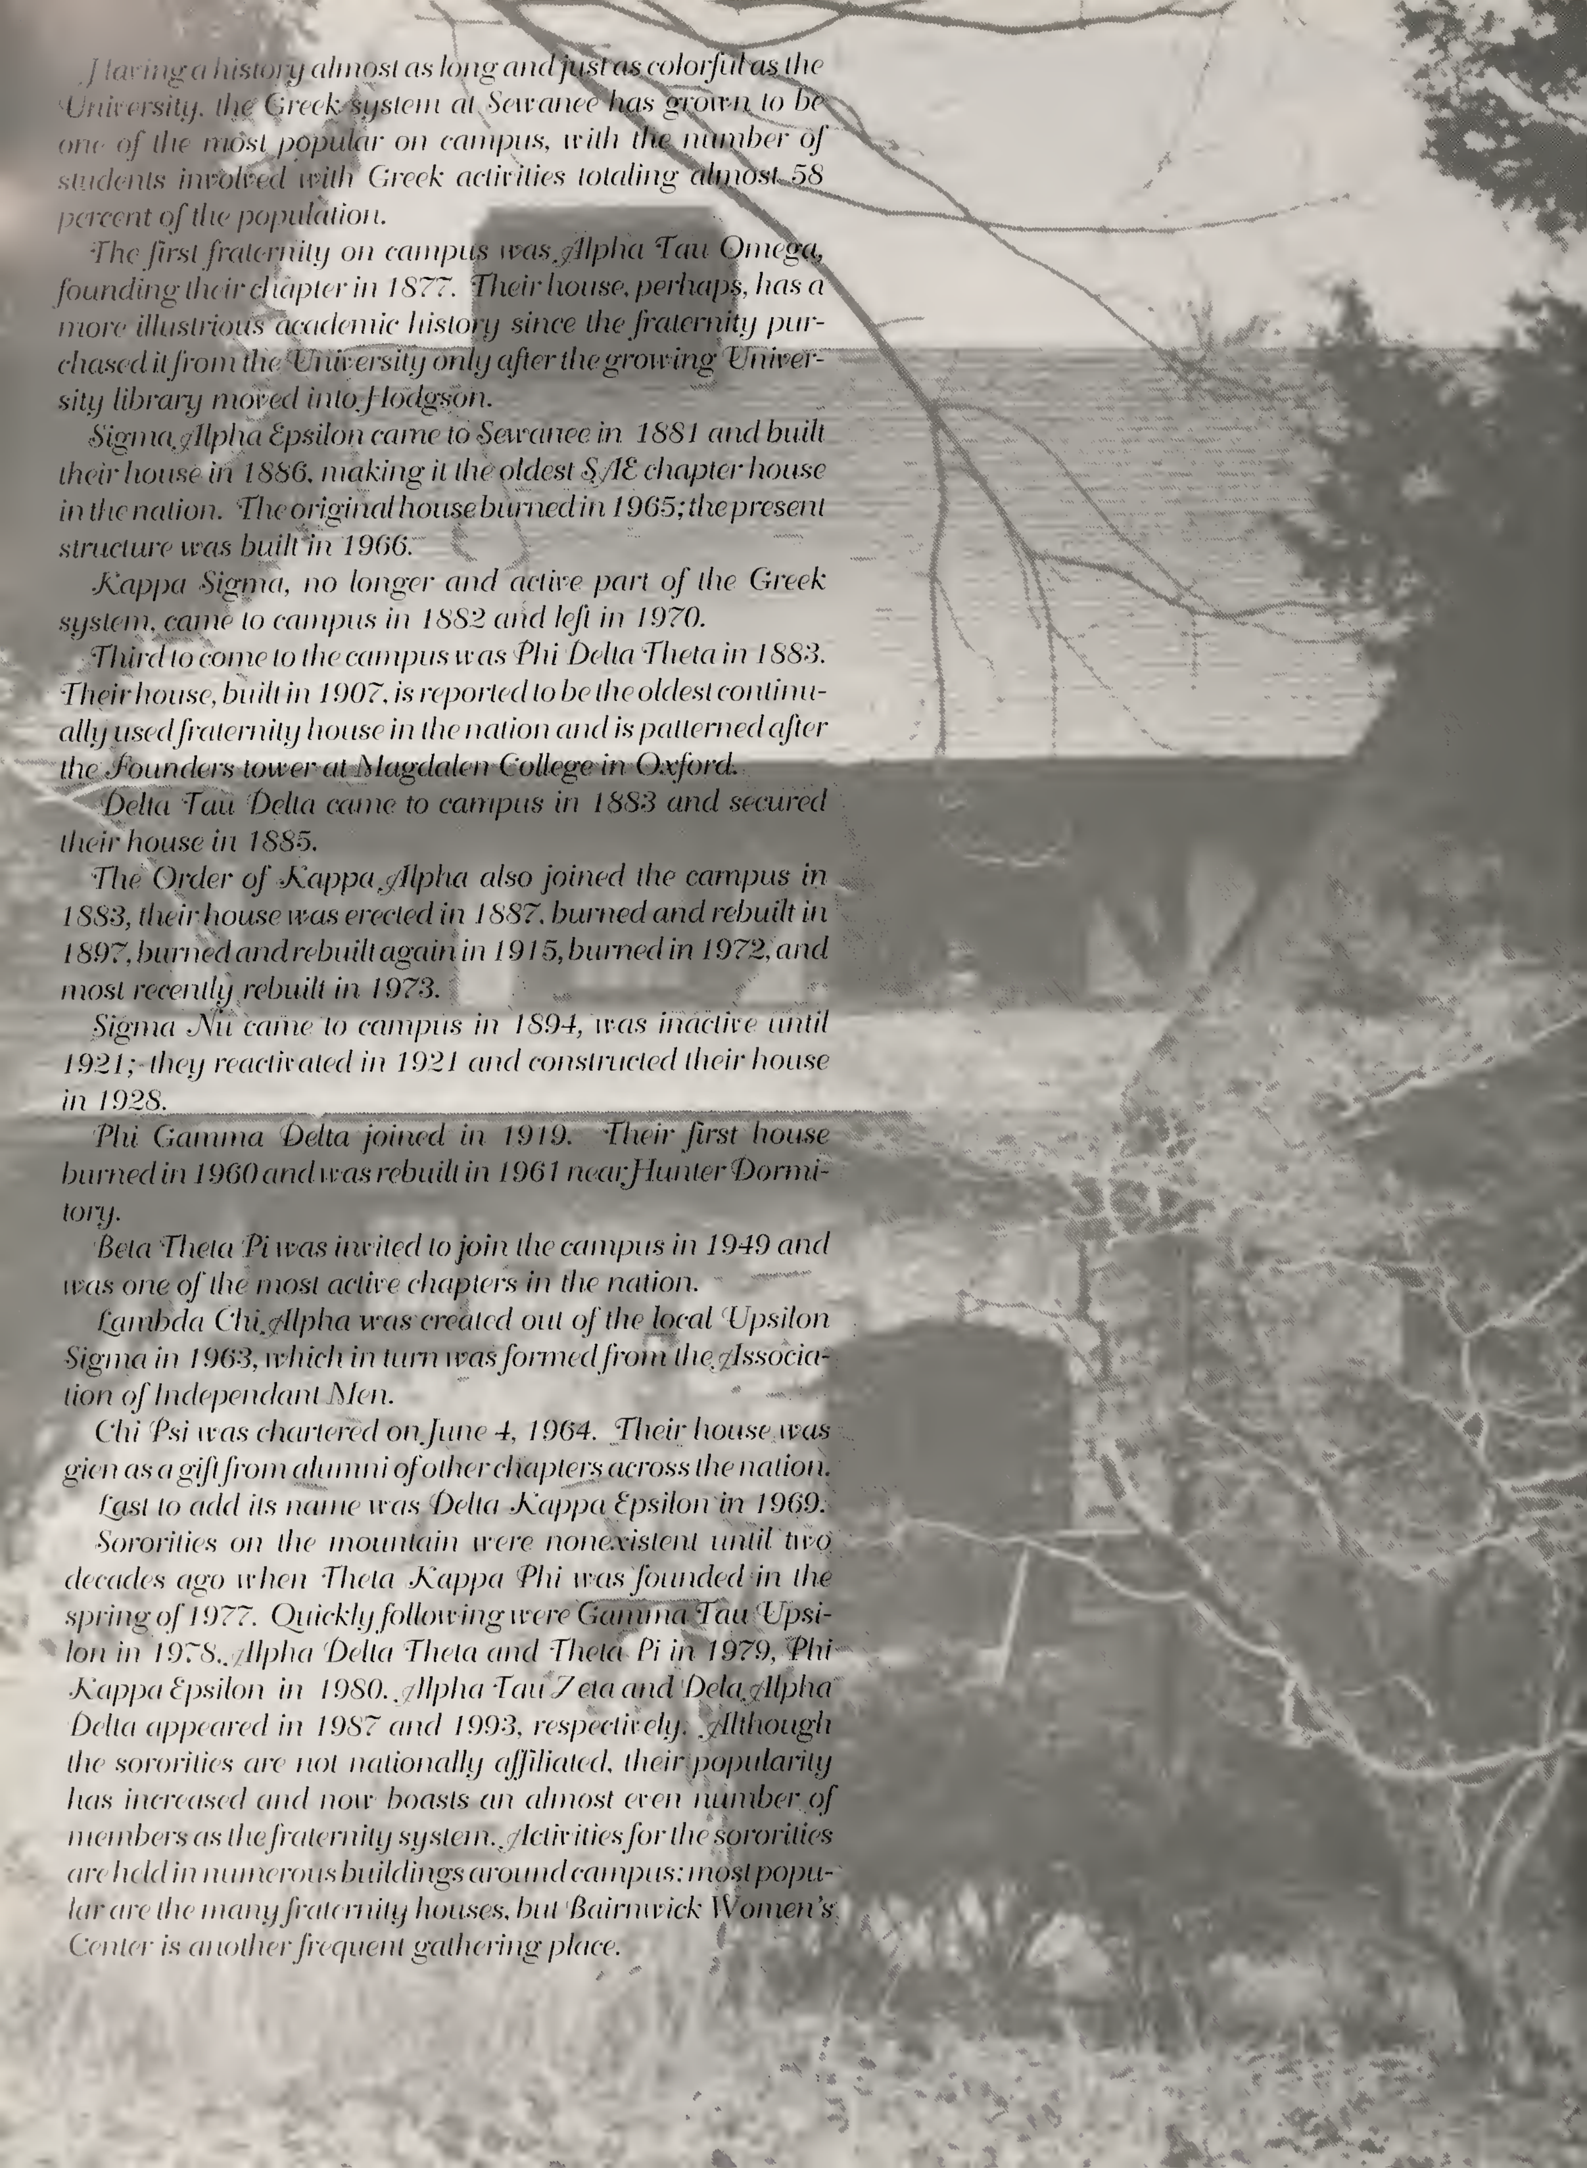
Order of the Silver Bone









Having a history almost as long and just as colorful as the University, the Greek system at Sewanee has grown to be one of the most popular on campus, with the number of students involved with Greek activities totaling almost 58 percent of the population.

The first fraternity on campus was Alpha Tau Omega, founding their chapter in 1877. Their house, perhaps, has a more illustrious academic history since the fraternity purchased it from the University only after the growing University library moved into Hodgson.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon came to Sewanee in 1881 and built their house in 1886, making it the oldest SAE chapter house in the nation. The original house burned in 1965; the present structure was built in 1966.

Kappa Sigma, no longer and active part of the Greek system, came to campus in 1882 and left in 1970.

Third to come to the campus was Phi Delta Theta in 1883. Their house, built in 1907, is reported to be the oldest continually used fraternity house in the nation and is patterned after the Founders tower at Magdalen College in Oxford.

Delta Tau Delta came to campus in 1883 and secured their house in 1885.

The Order of Kappa Alpha also joined the campus in 1883, their house was erected in 1887, burned and rebuilt in 1897, burned and rebuilt again in 1915, burned in 1972, and most recently rebuilt in 1973.

Sigma Nu came to campus in 1894, was inactive until 1921; they reactivated in 1921 and constructed their house in 1928.

Phi Gamma Delta joined in 1919. Their first house burned in 1960 and was rebuilt in 1961 near Hunter Dormitory.

Beta Theta Pi was invited to join the campus in 1949 and was one of the most active chapters in the nation.

Lambda Chi Alpha was created out of the local Upsilon Sigma in 1963, which in turn was formed from the Association of Independant Men.

Chi Psi was chartered on June 4, 1964. Their house was gien as a gift from alumni of other chapters across the nation.

Last to add its name was Delta Kappa Epsilon in 1969.

Sororities on the mountain were nonexistent until two decades ago when Theta Kappa Phi was founded in the spring of 1977. Quickly following were Gamma Tau Upsilon in 1978, Alpha Delta Theta and Theta Pi in 1979, Phi Kappa Epsilon in 1980. Alpha Tau Zeta and Dela Alpha Delta appeared in 1987 and 1993, respectively. Although the sororities are not nationally affiliated, their popularity has increased and now boasts an almost even number of members as the fraternity system. Activities for the sororities are held in numerous buildings around campus; most popular are the many fraternity houses, but Bairnwick Women's Center is another frequent gathering place.

Central to the activities of Student life is the memorial building to Bishop Juhan, commonly referred to as "the B.C." Constructed in 1974 to replace the burned Thompson Union, the Bishop's Common houses a small cafeteria, several student lounges and meeting rooms, the Student Post Office and Tiger Bay Pub. Numerous student Organizations have offices upstairs in the Trammel Communications Center: the Sewanee Purple, Student Government, Cap & Gown, Bacchus and WUTS 91.3 FM.

The older Thompson Hall, built in 1883 as the Chemical and Philosophical Hall to serve the Chemistry and Philosophy departments, became the medical school from 1892 to 1909. Thompson burned and was rebuilt in 1950, served as student center until 1974, and is now home to University Relations and Alumni offices and the Swanee Union Theatre.

Across the Street from Thompson to the North stands Fulford Hall, the original built in 1866 for Bishop Charles Todd Quintard. The structure burned in 1890, and the present structure was raised in its place. Alexander Guerry added the back wing in 1938 as a stipulation of his accepting the Vice-Chancelorship: Mrs. Guerry asked that Fulford be refurbished and enlarged to serve the entertaining needs of the University. Fulford remained residence for the Vice-Chancellors until the completion of Clement Chen Hall in 1994.

The present residence of the Vice-Chancellor, Clement Chen Hall was a gift of Clement Chen, a student from Shanghai, China between 1949 and 1951. Chen was always grateful to the University for aiding him in his academic endeavors, so when a contest was announced to design and build a new home for the Vice-Chancellor, Chen donated the money. Although Chen's career since Sewanee was one of distinction as an award winning architect, he did not design the house which won the competition, but the hall which bears his name is his gift to a beloved alma mater.

Dedication
Joshua Ernest McNeill
March 1,1977- October 16,1996

Joshua died on October 16, 1996 in a hiking accident when he fell to his death Amicalola Falls. He was very complex; I don't believe he ever let any one person kno everything about himself, it seemed as if he would not reveal the full extent of his mi to keep from being completely understood. There was a part of him that probably w never revealed to anyone, unless you could read it through his writings.

Life was very precious to Joshua and he could always find something beauti about anyone. He was the type of person who hated to see suffering, it was not h nature to condemn, but to uplift. I will always see him as "a friend to all." As one his friends from high school described him, "Joshua didn't always approve of the things that I did, but he always approved of me," that w Josh.

Living was important and Joshua looked forward to what lay ahead in li
It seems he found his niche in acting and wanted to pursue that as a career, t stage excited him and he became alive in the characters he became. As I atte theatrical presentations now, I think of him and the great possibilities th awaited, I feel he was robbed of his abilities because of the foolish chances took. As he wrote, "Past and Future walk together, I have nothing to fear," only he could have seen the future to know the chance he was taking.

I thank you all at Sewanee for the friendship and love you shared with my son, you were ecial to him, as I know he was special to you. Life must go on without him, but with him d his memory, to me, life is a little better.

Karen McNeill

*Hearing is not essential to exist, but, in order to Live, you must nderstand what is said. There does not need to be words: something n be said through a single glance - I love you; I hate you; everything ill be alright; it's all over. An understanding of a situation allows life be lived to its full extent, not squandered in fear. An interesting uestion surrounds this thought: if there is someone, or something, resent to say that everything will be alright, and this is truly heard, ill, in fact, everything be all right? Is there truly a need for fear? The tcome may not be known, but with an understanding of the uation, an acceptance can be made of future pains and pleasures.
isting–deaf to the soft voice reaching, hand open, clasping your nsciousness, saying all will be fine–covers the carcasses of so many npty. I refuse to be covered. I do not fear the uncertainty of things come. Fear does not dare cross the threshold of my soul, for I have asoned out the need for this "comfort" of society. People have a ing for fear–it arouses their senses, and they find security in not owing of what is to come. I do not know Future, but I also know at Future does not know me. Future is not some overwhelming rce that lords over me like some absolute monarch that I blindly row my trust toward. Present and I exist and live together, as two ual working parts, and our labor produces Future, which coexist terchangeably with Past. Through knowing that Past lies numb in y head and that Past and Future walk together, I have nothing to ar.*

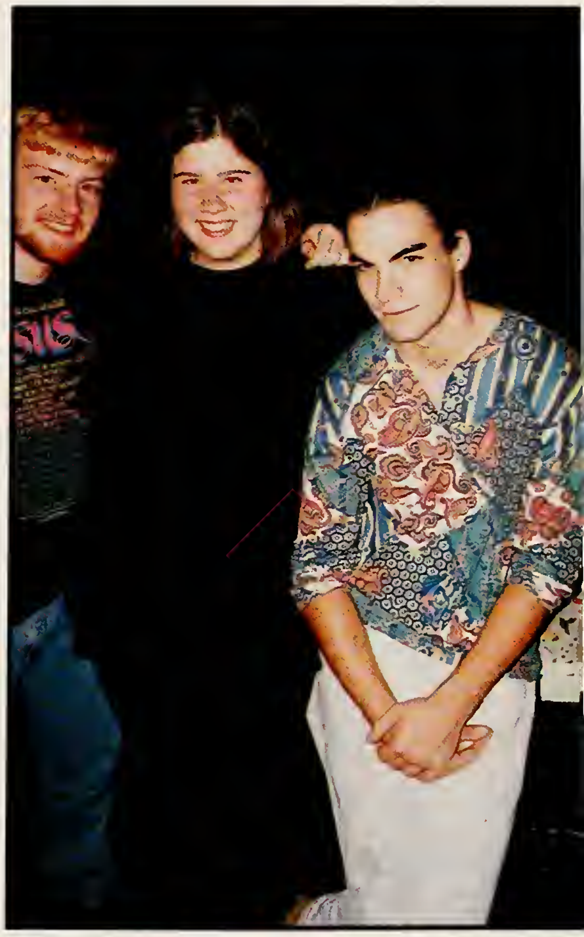
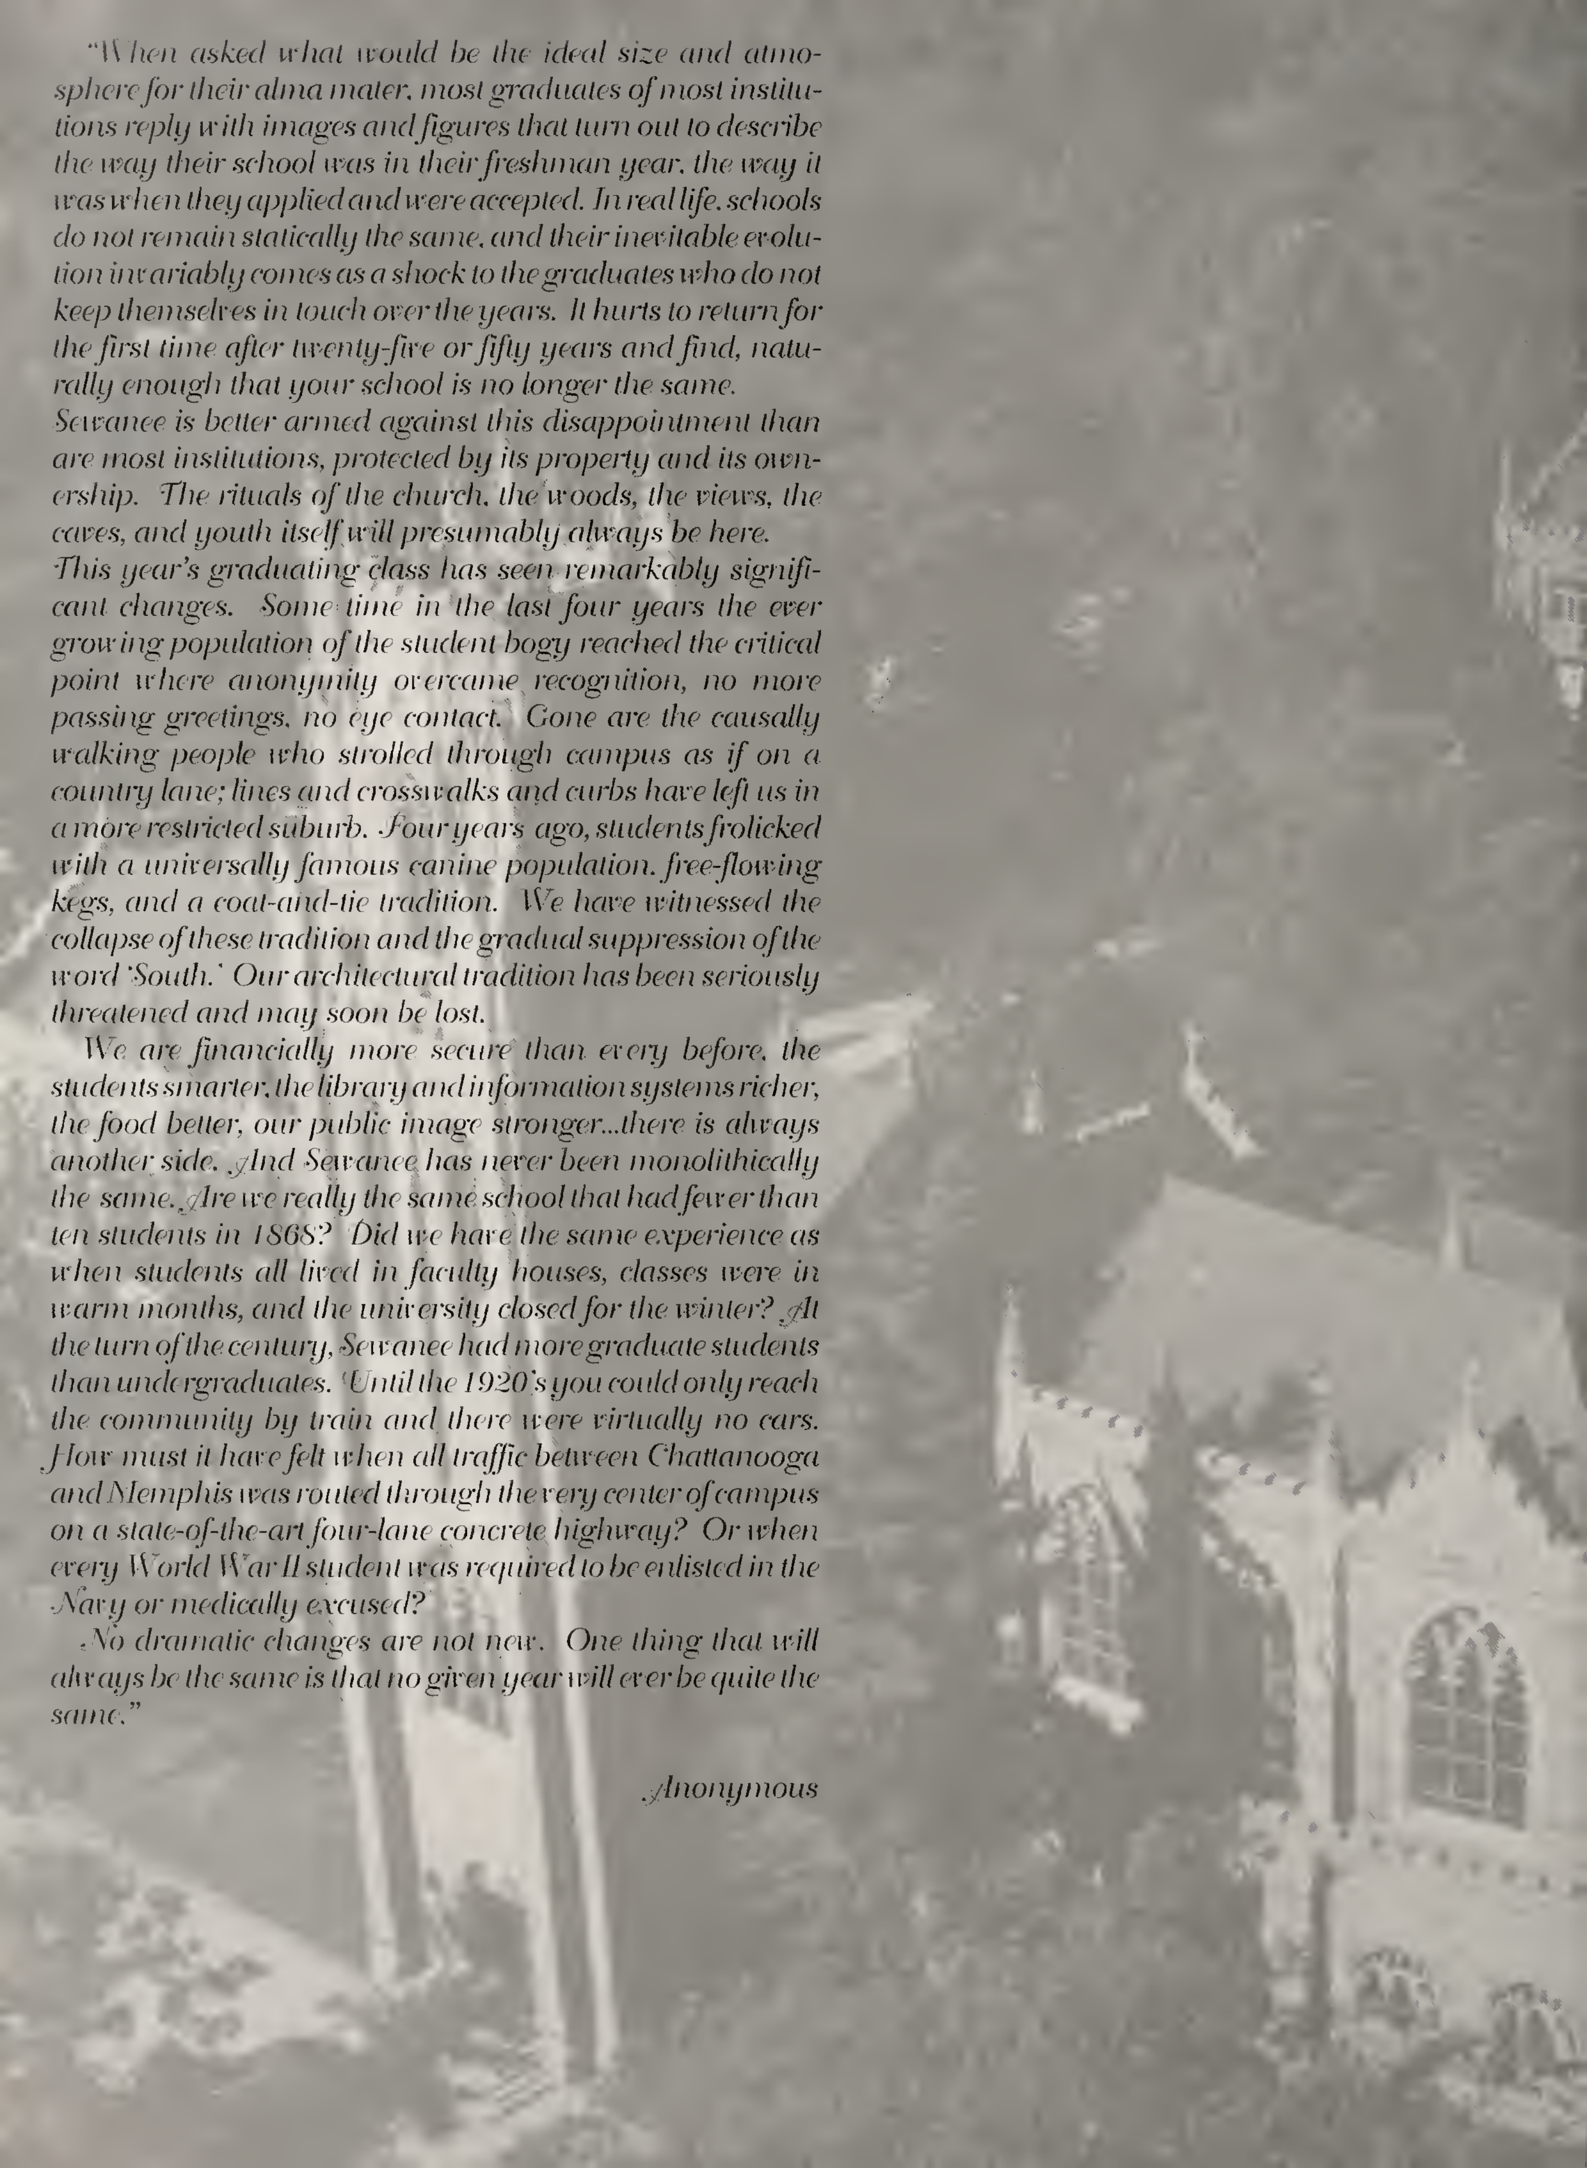
Josh McNeill





"When asked what would be the ideal size and atmosphere for their alma mater, most graduates of most institutions reply with images and figures that turn out to describe the way their school was in their freshman year, the way it was when they applied and were accepted. In real life, schools do not remain statically the same, and their inevitable evolution invariably comes as a shock to the graduates who do not keep themselves in touch over the years. It hurts to return for the first time after twenty-five or fifty years and find, naturally enough that your school is no longer the same.

Sewanee is better armed against this disappointment than are most institutions, protected by its property and its ownership. The rituals of the church, the woods, the views, the caves, and youth itself will presumably always be here.

This year's graduating class has seen remarkably significant changes. Some time in the last four years the ever growing population of the student bogy reached the critical point where anonymity overcame recognition, no more passing greetings, no eye contact. Gone are the causally walking people who strolled through campus as if on a country lane; lines and crosswalks and curbs have left us in a more restricted suburb. Four years ago, students frolicked with a universally famous canine population, free-flowing kegs, and a coat-and-tie tradition. We have witnessed the collapse of these tradition and the gradual suppression of the word 'South.' Our architectural tradition has been seriously threatened and may soon be lost.

We are financially more secure than every before, the students smarter, the library and information systems richer, the food better, our public image stronger...there is always another side. And Sewanee has never been monolithically the same. Are we really the same school that had fewer than ten students in 1868? Did we have the same experience as when students all lived in faculty houses, classes were in warm months, and the university closed for the winter? At the turn of the century, Sewanee had more graduate students than undergraduates. Until the 1920's you could only reach the community by train and there were virtually no cars. How must it have felt when all traffic between Chattanooga and Memphis was routed through the very center of campus on a state-of-the-art four-lane concrete highway? Or when every World War II student was required to be enlisted in the Navy or medically excused?

No dramatic changes are not new. One thing that will always be the same is that no given year will ever be quite the same."

The wind sits in the shoulder of your sail,
And you are stayed for. There–my blessing with thee,
And these few precepts in thy memory
Look thou character...
Be thou familiar, but by no means vulgar.
Those friends thou hast, and their adoption tried,
Grapple them to thy soul with hoops of steel;
But do not dull thy palm with entertainment
Of each new-hatched, unfledged comrade.
– from Hamlet, William Shakespeare

Margaret, are you grieving Over Goldengrove unleaving...
Ah! as the heart grows older
It will come to such sights colder
By and by, nor spare a sigh...
And yet you will weep and know why.
Now no matter, child, the name:
Sorrow's springs are the same...
It is the blight man was born for,
It is Margaret you mourn for.
–from Spring and Fall, Gerald Manly Hopkins

In sight of leaving Sewanee, I am at a loss for words to concisely express my sentiment. I hope my friends, be they Phi or GDI, will forgive my resorting to the words of others.

...What black hours
we have spent
This night...
And more must, in yet longer light's delay...
